WEBSITE TERMS

Last updated: 10 November 2026

1. About these terms

These terms cover your use of the H3 website. They do not form a client agreement. Client engagements are governed by the proposal and agreement for that work, and by our general terms and data processing agreement.

2. Use of this site

You may read and share the content on this site. Unless stated otherwise, the site's text, original visuals and H3 brand belong to H3. Third-party names and marks remain the property of their respective owners. Please do not present any of this material as your own.

3. No advice

The content here is for general information. It is not tailored advice for your organisation. For that, book a conversation.

4. Links and third parties

Some links lead to third-party services (for example our booking calendar). H3 is not responsible for their content or their terms.

5. Liability

We take reasonable care to keep this site accurate and available, but cannot promise that it will always be complete, current, error-free or uninterrupted. To the extent permitted by law, H3 is not liable for loss arising from reliance on this site or from its unavailability.

6. Governing law

These terms and the use of this site are governed by Dutch law. Disputes are submitted to the District Court of Amsterdam (Rechtbank Amsterdam), unless the law designates another court.

7. Changes and contact

We may update these website terms when the site or its services change. Questions about these terms: hello@h3.company.

These terms are also available in Dutch. If the two differ, the Dutch text prevails.
